BITING THE HAND THAT FEEDS US

A Note from CSC’s Artistic Director

You know the movie This is Spinal Tap? It’s a “mockumentary” film made in the early 80’s that satirizes heavy metal bands and documentaries about heavy metal bands. It’s terribly funny. One of the things that makes it funny is that the filmmakers clearly know the music and have great affection for it. I think you have to have that when it comes to creating satire. Otherwise, it can come across as mean rather than funny. The Complete Works of William Shakespeare (Abridged) was clearly created with great affection for Shakespeare. Its writers obviously have a passion for his works. Without a certain depth of knowledge about Shakespeare and his works, I’m not sure one would even know about Titus Andronicus, let alone be able to parody it.

We do too. We have a passion and affection for Shakespeare (so much so we put the word Shakespeare in our name!) That’s why it’s been so much fun to work on this production. We try to not take ourselves too seriously—although we try and take the work seriously. So, this is a way for us to share with you the quirkiness and wonderful pretentiousness of Shakespeare and his plays.

The Complete Works of William Shakespeare (Abridged) has a great appeal to those of us who love Shakespeare, and to those of us, who on occasion, get slightly annoyed with Shakespeare. Sometimes, of course, that can be the same person! Do we find the “Seven Ages of Man” speech to be sublime? Do we think it’s beautiful? Check and check. Do we also find the plot devices in Shakespeare’s comedies slightly redundant? Also check. That’s what this play allows us to do—celebrate Shakespeare and…well, not quite bite the hand that feeds us, but maybe just nibble a bit on that hand.

We’ve been having great fun playing with the Complete Works. I know you will too.

We’re glad you’re here

THE COMPLETE WORKS OF WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE (ABRIDGED)
Here at the Chesapeake Shakespeare Company, our staff and board are very busy with our first Strategic Plan since we moved into this beautiful theatre in 2014. We’re doing a ton of thinking about who we are, what we do, and what we want to do. It’s got me thinking about our audiences—about you.

At a time in which it’s so easy to settle into your couch and see a great TV show with fabulous special effects, or sink into your pillow and watch YouTube videos of singing otters on your phone, you chose to get dressed, come downtown (to Downtown Baltimore!) and see a play. Wow! That’s kind of amazing.

It’s my job to ask you what it is about our shows that you like and don’t like, and many of you generously take the time to tell us. It matters to you that our space is warm and comfortable, that our staff is friendly, that our actors say hello after the performances. It’s meaningful enough to get you off that seductive sofa.

And who wouldn’t have a great time at The Complete Works of William Shakespeare (Abridged)? It’s so much fun! You’re falling out of your seats, laughing—admit it! But you’re not just coming for fun times. Last month, there we were at full capacity for Shakespeare’s “problem play,” Measure for Measure. It sure didn’t seem to be a problem for our audiences to come here to wrestle with its timeless questions of mercy vs. justice and its #metoo-timely theme of sexual harassment.

Mostly, I think we—you and me and everyone around you today—want to share experiences with other people.

I think we want to laugh and be filled with joy and feel moved by mercy or loss. And I think it’s different (better!) when we share those feelings with two hundred other people and with the live artists who are shaping those moments. Our ¾ thrust theatre intensifies that human connection as you watch other folks across the theatre mirroring your emotions.

It’s something you sure can’t get from your phone.

And without you, we have no reason to do any theatre at all. So, thanks for putting down your phones and spending a couple of hours having fun with all of us. Congratulations on making the choice to be a little more human today.

THE COMPLETE WORKS OF WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE (ABRIDGED)
Chesapeake Shakespeare Company creates performances and education programs out of great classic theater. Classic plays can be awfully good, but only if they speak to their audience and the community in a way that is dynamic, personal, and pleasurable. We produce plays that people like and we perform them in innovative and intimate ways that intensify the connection between audiences and artists. We do this because we want to know what makes Shakespeare so great – and we ask our audience and our community to explore that question alongside us. Chesapeake Shakespeare Company is a 501c3 nonprofit organization.
